TCM Applications: Clears lung heat, clears heat-toxin, dispels wind-heat, moistens lung yin, resolves phlegm.

Comments: SVP LUNG FORMULA (“sticky, viral phlegm”) is used for early or middle presentations of acute cough. Symptoms include a harsh or hacking cough, with small amounts of phlegm. This is the most common presentation of early cough, often following onset of a common cold. Certain antiviral herbs chase the causative agent. It can also be used for pertussis and smoker’s cough.

Clears heat, resolves toxin, cools blood, disperses swelling. Use for acute heat-toxin inflammation affecting the lymph, blood or organ level. Effective for viral tonsillitis, viral hepatitis, herpes simplex and zoster, common cold, influenza, mononucleosis, measles, mumps, and chicken pox. Also used for bacterial infections causing sore throat, tonsillitis, sinusitis, and skin infections and boils.

Pulse: Floating, rapid, excess

Tongue: Normal, or with red tongue tip

Comments: This small formula is a valuable treatment for heat-toxins (viral and bacterial) attacking the throat, lymph or liver. All three of the herbs used have strong antiviral properties. Chuān xīn lián is a recently utilized herb, not commonly found in the classical literature. It is reinforced with bǎn lán gēn and pú gōng yīng. Besides treatment of sore throat, the formula is good for swollen lymph glands in acute mononucleosis, and is a good adjunct in influenza. It is also effective for outbreaks of herpes simplex (oral and genital) and zoster (shingles), when combined with lóng dǎn xiè gān tāng (龙胆泻肝汤), which clears heat out of the liver or gallbladder channel.

The pills can be crushed and mixed with salve or Vaseline and applied directly to zoster sores or infected wounds.

Clears heat, resolves toxin, dispels wind, relieves cough, opens the nasal passages, brightens the eyes. Use for shaoyang and yangming stages of pathogenic wind with symptoms of flu, fever with chills, headache, sore throat, red eyes, stiffness of upper back and neck, nasal discharge, general aching, and swollen lymph glands. Useful in common cold, influenza and viral pneumonia.

Pulse: Floating, rapid, excess

Tongue: Normal, or with red tongue tip

Comments: This is the most effective herbal product for the treatment of common cold, especially when administered early and at every 3 hours. It is the largest-selling patent medicine in China. The two lead herbs, gǎng méi gēn and sān chā kǔ, are not referenced in classical or modern TCM source books, and are indigenous to Taiwan. It is combined with other herbs to fight heat-toxins such as bǎn lán gēn and jīn yín huā, totalling 71% of the formula. Chrysanthemum yě jú huā and mǔ jīng yè (a cousin to màn jīng zǐ (蔓荆子, Fructus Viticis) clear wind-heat and bring the formula to the nose and eyes. Gan Mao Ling can be taken alone or combined with Yin Qiao San (Chapter 1B), which reinforces the dispersal of wind-heat.

There are many versions of Gan Mao Ling. Both Plum Flower, and Herbal Times' Gan Mao Jie Du Wan follow the original formula from Yang Cheng. Some providers, including Kan and Golden Flower, substitute máo dōng qīng (毛冬青, Radix Ilex Pubescens) for gǎng méi gēn. Kan and Golden Flower also substitute wú zhū yú (吴茱萸, Fructus Evodiae), a hot herb, for Evodia sān chā kǔ, a cold herb. This may have been a mistake, but it does have the benefit of warming the stomach and protecting against the coldness of the other herbs.

Soothes the liver, dispels liver heat, harmonizes and resolves half exterior-half interior, transforms phlegm, tonifies spleen qi. Use for various applications: 1) harmonizes and resolves shaoyang syndrome (half exterior-half interior syndromes), including exogenous heat-toxins that have moved in towards the interior, causing costal distension, lymphatic congestion, alternating chills and fever, bitter taste in mouth, nausea, and lingering illness; 2) congestion of liver qi with spleen qi deficiency causing digestive disturbance, including nausea, poor appetite, epigastric or costal distension, blood sugar imbalance, fatigue, irritability, and chronic hepatitis; 3) menstrual disorders due to liver qi stagnation, including irregular periods and premenstrual tension. The formula is also helpful for wind-cold attacking the uterus after childbirth or menses.

Pulse: Wiry in liver/gallbladder position and soft in spleen position

Tongue: Normal, or white coat

Comments: This historic formula addresses deficiency of liver stasis with deficiency of spleen qi and accumulation of phlegm. It is applied to three distinct presentations: shaoyang fevers with chills, including malaria; liver-spleen disharmony affecting digestion; and liver-spleen disharmony affecting menses. From a physiological perspective, it also facilitates detoxification of the liver and lymphatic system, and helps regulate blood sugar.

Bupleurum chái hú is the principal herb for moving liver qi. When combined with huáng qín, it clears liver heat. Dǎng shēn, dà zǎo and gān cǎo boost spleen qí, and harmonize liver and spleens. Bàn xià and shēng jiāng clear phlegm, harmonize the stomach and gallbladder, and lower rebellious qí.

Invigorates blood, breaks blood stasis, soothes the liver, opens heart orifices, relieves chest oppression and pain. Use for stagnation of qi and blood in the upper burner, including the chest, epigastrium, or head. Symptoms include chest or costal pain accompanied by restless sleep, palpitation, dizziness, irritability or depression. Also for chronic stabbing headache due to trauma; also for oppression in the epigastrium causing belching, prolonged hiccoughs or a choking sensation. Use in coronary heart disease, angina, arrhythmia and head trauma, and hypertension due to blood stagnation. Can be used as a preventative before or following stroke.

SUGGESTED USE:
Shake well before using.

Dosage age 6 and above: 1 teaspoon (5-6 squirts), 2-3 times per day.
Add 1-2 inches of boiling water.
Take away from food by at least 15 min.
Safe during pregnancy.

Replenishes qi, tonifies wei qi, consolidates the exterior, stops sweating. Use for deficiency of wei qi causing spontaneous sweating, catching cold easily, or before or during allergies. Symptoms can include sensitivity to cold and wind, fatigue, pale or puffy complexion, low voice, and poor appetite. Use for pediatric cold, chronic hay fever allergies and chronic nasal discharge of white or clear mucus. Used adjunctively in the treatment of chronic disease, including AIDS, tuberculosis, and weakened liver due to cirrhosis or hepatitis. Taken preventatively for the common cold, to boost immune responsiveness, and to prevent allergy.

Pulse: Normal, or floating and soft

Tongue: Normal, or pale

Comments: This is a valuable formula for building a weakened immune system, especially when the symptoms include perspiring easily or sensitivity to wind or cold. It is valuable in pediatric conditions for chronic runny nose and as a qi tonic during hay fever allergies.

A simple formula, it uses bái zhú to build and astringe ying qi, huáng qi to build wei qi, and fáng fēng to disperse wei qi to the surface. Most manufacturers follow the standardized formula, with 60% belonging to huáng qi.

MEASLES

Source: Pediatrics in Chinese Medicine, Wang, Mulin and Zhao, People's Medical Publishing House, 2012

- An acute infectious viral disease
- Main symptoms: fever, cough, nasal discharge, Koplik's spots on pharynx and the inner cheeks, red maculopapular rash
- Effective vaccine has been available since 1963 (60+ years)
- World-wide, has caused 107,000 deaths in 2023, mostly children 6 months to 5 years, in third world

In TCM:

- Mainly affects lung and spleen
- Divided into 3 stages: Initial fever stage, Eruption stage, Recovery stage
- Most prevalent in winter and spring
- Incubation is 10-14 days
- May appear in vaccinated within 3-4 weeks

1. Initial Fever Stage: Pathogenic Qi Attacks Lung; Lung Qi Fails To Descend

- Symptoms: high fever up to 104, aversion to cold, sneezing, cough, nasal discharge, red eyes, Koplik's spots, photophobia, diarrhea
- Measles is confirmed by measles antibodies
- Treatment principle: promote eruption, clear heat, release the exterior, expel pathogens, nourish yin, diffuse the lung

2. Eruption Stage

- Lasts 3-5 days
- Rash appears 3 days after fever starts, usually behind ears or hairline
- Within 2-3 days entire body is affected with rash
- Rash can be irregular, with some areas untouched
- Treatment principle: Clear heat, remove toxins, promote eruption, expel pathogens

3. Recovery Stage

- 3-4 days after eruption of rash, fever begins to recede and general health improves
- Rash completely disappears in 2-3 weeks
- Treatment principle: nourish yin, clear heat

TREATMENT OF MEASLES

1. Initial Fever Stage:

Releases the exterior to dispel pathogenic wind, clears heat-toxin, benefits the throat, relieves thirst, diffuses lung qi. Use for early stage of common cold with symptoms of sore throat, low fever, thirst, aching shoulders and neck, headache or dry cough. Helpful for pediatric ear infection, tonsillitis and influenza. Also useful in early presentations of childhood viral diseases, including chicken pox, rubella, roseola and measles. May have beneficial effects in hives or skin itching with heat.

Pulse: Floating, rapid, excess or tight

Tongue: Normal, or with red tongue tip

Comments: This is an effective medicine for common cold when taken within the first twelve hours of the earliest symptoms of sore throat or general aching. Like other formulas for early wind-heat invasion, it should be given every 3 to 4 hours. The herbs jīn yín huā and lián qiào (which define the name Yin Qiao) are very effective against viruses causing upper respiratory infections; niú bàng zǐ addresses sore throat. Once the viral pathogen works its way into the interior with more pronounced symptoms, switch to, or combine with, formulas in Chapter 2A. Heat-Toxins.

Yin Qiao San is an important formula for pushing heat toxins to the surface and is used as a foundation for treating pediatric chicken pox, measles, and roseola. It is usually combined with a formula from Chapter 2A.

Yin Qiao is not appropriate once the pathogen has entered the lungs and is producing cough. For cough, look at formulas in Unit 3. Respiratory Disorders.
